The Fulbright U.S. Scholar Program offers opportunities for American academics, artists, and experienced professionals to lecture (4-9 months) or conduct research (3-9 months) at Polish academic and research institutions. Proposals are welcome from candidates in all disciplines with established relations with the host institution.

The Fulbright U.S. Student Program allows graduating college seniors, graduate students, young professionals, and artists to conduct their own research projects for two academic semesters at Poland's best universities and research centers. Proposals are welcome from candidates in all disciplines with established relations with the host institution.

The Fulbright English Teaching Assistant Program (ETA) places recent U.S. college graduates and young professionals at universities and institutions of higher education across Poland and allows them to teach or co-teach practical and specialized professional English language classes for two academic semesters. Candidates with prior teaching experience are especially welcome to apply. Beginning in Spring 2020, the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs (ECA) of the U.S. Department of State will fully fund a preparatory 60-hour online TESOL course for all incoming ETAs.

The Fulbright Specialist Program aims to provide a short-term (2 to 6 weeks), on-demand project collaboration with Polish institutions. Project activities may include delivering a seminar, workshop or guest lecture, consulting on faculty or workforce development, conducting needs assessments or evaluations for a program or institution, or developing academic or training curricula and materials.

Polish people have been so incredibly kind and welcoming. Once you get to know them and their culture, it is all very complex and very genuine. My interactions with people over here have been some of the most rewarding adult interactions of my life.

Bhumi Dalia,
2018-19 ETA

The particular area of research that I do which is bacteriophage research was founded here in Europe, specifically in Poland. It's kind of monumental to come back to the same place where this type of research originated. I really enjoy the applicable nature of bacteriophage therapy and that was something that I was only able to get here in Poland.

Jamon Thomas,
2019-20 U.S. Student Researcher

With its picturesque old towns and medieval architecture, wild forests and powdery-sand beaches, humming city life and imaginative culinary scene, Poland is a country that is as captivating as it is surprising. In addition to all that, a competitive higher education system, relatively low living costs, and easy access to other European countries make Poland a perfect destination for an unforgettable study-abroad experience.

The Fulbright Program in Poland is administered by the Polish-U.S. Fulbright Commission. Our grants include benefits such as a monthly stipend, round-trip travel allowance, private health care, administrative and academic support, and financial support for the accompanying family. In addition to teaching or conducting research, our grantees also have the opportunity to participate in a variety of cultural and networking activities organized by various Fulbright Commissions in Europe including the annual EU-NATO Seminar in Belgium and Berlin Seminar in Germany, as well as engage in public diplomacy events across Poland.
